ANATOLE FRANCE

Complete Limited Edition in English

For the first time the complete works of the great French novelist and author will appear in English. This series of handsomely made books will be under the general editorship of Mr. Frederic Chapman, the volumes now ready being

THE RED LILY
MOTHER OF PEARL
THE GARDEN OF EPICURUS
THE CRIME OF SYLVESTRE BONNARD

(Lafcadio Hearn's Exquisite Version)

During the autumn and next year the remaining volumes will follow, including the monumental study of Joan of Arc, probably the most discussed book in the world of letters to-day.

FORMAT.—These great novels will not be issued in the usual form of current fiction, but will be octavo in form, printed on a special light-weight paper with wide margins, bound in red and gold, gilt top, end papers from designs by Beardsley, initials by Ospovat.

PRICE—The series will be issued at $2 per volume, excepting the Joan of Arc (in two volumes) at $8 net.

"I have sought truth strenuously. I have met her boldly."
—ANATOLE FRANCE.

His work is illuminated with style, scholarship and psychology; but its unique feature is the lambent wit, the gay mockery, the genial irony with which he touches every subject he treats. But the wit is never malicious, the mockery never derisive, the irony never barbed.

To the Trade:

If we could show you before publication why we are convinced that

KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON'S

Novel

will be a big popular seller

would you not distribute before publication day the return order post card, handsomely printed in colors, which we will supply on application, and place a liberal advance order for the book?

On August 29th, we will make an announcement on the front page of The Publishers' Weekly, which will show you why we believe that The Masquerader's successor will be a big seller.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE NEW NOVEL

By a series of brilliant novels, beginning with "The Circle," Katherine Cecil Thurston has made herself one of the most popular novelists both in Great Britain and in the United States. In characterization, in dramatic power and in the brilliancy of story-telling "The Fly on the Wheel" is as good a story as Mrs. Thurston has ever written. The hero, strong, self-willed, successful, but bound down in a routine from which he is helpless to escape; and the heroine, young, eager, impulsive, vibrant, interest you at once. The story increases in interest and strength as it moves along, and ends in a climax of intense dramatic power.

NOTES IN SEASON.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish on August 29 a new novel by F. Hopkinson Smith, entitled "Peter, a novel of which he is not the hero." It is a genial optimistic story of love and business in the present, exciting, but wholesome nevertheless. There are several illustrations.

PUBLICATION of Miss Adeline Knapp's novel of Arizona life, "The Well in the Desert," has been postponed by the Century Company till late August. The author herself characterizes the book as "the merest attempt to touch the spiritual drama," which "has come to interest me immensely."

THE REILLY & BRITTON COMPANY will bring out on September 1 a novel entitled "A Little Brother of the Rich." The author, whose name will be announced later, is said to be a man of social, financial and political position. The publishers will send an advance copy free to any bookseller who wishes to inform himself of the character of the book.

THE MCCLURE COMPANY will publish on the 19th inst. "The Riverman," a novel by Stewart Edward White, author of "Arizona Nights," etc. "The Riverman" is described as being the logical successor to "The Blazed Trail," a story of the lumber camps in the great forests of Northern Michigan, following the lumber in its travels down the rivers to the mills.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have just ready a novel by Mary Roberts Rinehart, entitled "The Circular Staircase." It is a detective story, a novel of mystery, that is described as being worthy "a place beside Conan Doyle and Anna Katherine Green." Its author has been a regular contributor to the magazines, but this is her first venture as a writer of a long novel. The book has been illustrated by Lester Ralph.

DUFFIELD & CO. will bring out on the 22d inst. "The Sword of Dundee," a story of the time of "Bonnie Prince Charlie," by Theodora Peck, whose "Hester of the Grants" had a large sale for a first book. They will publish on the 29th inst. an edition of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," with pictures in colors by Millicent Sowerby; "Childhood," verses and pictures by Millicent and Githa Sowerby, with twelve full-page pictures in colors, which, by English critics, have been described as a blend of Kate Greenaway and Boutet de Monvel; also, "Bumbletoes," by the Sowerby sisters, a gay little fairy tale with bright pictures in colors.

THE REID PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 Huntington Avenue, Boston, have just ready a novel entitled "The Realm of Light," by Frank Hatfield, describing the experiences of two Chicago business men who are persuaded by an old Hungarian to go with him into the heart of Africa on a voyage of discovery. After months of hardship they reach a mountain, the summit of which they scale by an almost superhuman effort. There they find a people—a race of giants—who for thousands of years have lived a life free from self-seeking—in fact, the ideal life. Since our year one they had controlled the solar energy and made it subservient to their needs; had constructed telescopes that brought the moon and planets within the range of intelligent perception and had achieved other miraculous things. The book abounds in romance and food for thought and discussion for the reader who can read between the lines. They have also just ready the tenth thousand of "Paul Anthon Christian," by Hiram W. Hayes, which will appeal to those interested in Christian Healing.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

☞ The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not covered by the rules, whether published by members of the American Publishers' Association or not, are preceded by a single asterisk, and the word net follows the price. ☜

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Author is member of American Society of Inspectors of Plumbing and Sanitary Engineers, member Royal Sanitary Institute of Great Britain, etc., etc. The book includes Constructing the house sewer, The house drain, Materials for the house drain, Installing the house drain, The installation of rain leaders.

Amundsen, Captain Roald. The Northwest Passage: being the record of a voyage of exploration of the ship "Gjoa" in the years 1903-07; [with a supplement by Lieut. Hansen.] 2 v. N. Y., Dutton, 1908. il. maps, O. cl., *$8 net.

The accomplishment of a voyage from the Atlantic to the Pacific along the northern coast of the American continent—the dream of explorers for nearly four hundred years—is in itself enough to give vital interest to these volumes. The work has scientific value as well, on account of the investigation of magnetic conditions around the north magnetic pole carried on by Captain Amundsen and his men, and ethnological importance through the new information given on the subject of the Eskimo. But what will probably appeal most fully to the readers is the day to day record of a few brave men penetrating icy straits and uncharted seas, the story of their life among the friendly Eskimos, and their final success after more than three years of dangers and triumphs. Lieut. Hansen gives the record of his sledge expedition to Victoria Land in the spring of 1905.

Ayscough, J:, (pseud.) Marotz. N. Y., Putnam, 1908. 415 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

A story of Sicily at the time when Victor Emanuel ruled Italy and Pope Leo XIII. led his world-embracing life within the limits of the Vatican. Marotz is the "daughter of a hundred earls." She is a spiritual nature. Five months of her convent life are described in detail; also her inspiring meeting with Pope Leo XIII. when she attended his private mass. Between forty and fifty characters play their parts in the life of Marotz, who becomes the mother of an inspired young priest. It is said a military officer writes over the above pen name.

Author is fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, and honorary member of the English, French and Italian Alpine Clubs. He writes from an experience of over forty years' wandering through the Alps. The early chapters treat of the mountains on the physical side—their pastures, glaciers, flowers, beasts and birds. Later chapters describe the diverse people dwelling in the Alps, and the explorers and guides who have penetrated their recesses. In the closing chapter the Alps are considered in detail, as forming twenty groups with diverse characteristic features.

Oklahoma is the scene. Two young girls from New England are there as teachers in the Indian schools in the early '80's. One succumbs to the conditions and meets an early death. The elder, wilful, daring, fearless and beautiful, is a force among both the whites and the Indians A young Indian crosses her path and almost wins her, but the sheriff of the county, a man with a history, conquers her wild nature. Both love truly, both forgive and forget, and the end is satisfying.

The author of "The certainty of a future life in Mars" and "A woman of the ice age" again indulges his imagination to picture what would happen if the Isthmus of Panama sank into the sea and the Gulf stream of the Atlantic ocean flowed into the Pacific. He pictures the changes of geology, climate, physical and political geography that would result throughout the world. England would be too cold to live in and its evacuation organized by King Edward VII. is described. The king reaches Australasia and finds himself again king "by popular vote." Under this ingenious skit the author shows his knowledge of science and contemporary human problems.

The title is taken from a poem of Swinburne's. When the heroine, Amy Steevens, first appears she had been for years a rolling stone. She had assisted in a dressmaker's shop and in a typewriting establishment; had been secretary to an author and companion to an idle lady abroad; had been on the stage, to Russia with conspirators and on a battlefield in South Africa and in the hospitals afterwards. She was efficient under every combination of circumstances. She becomes housekeeper for an English authoress with an abnormally clever daughter of twelve and a husband who proves Amy's fate. An enlargement and adaptation of "Revised normal lessons," which was itself a revision of "Outline normal lessons." The reason for another revision is that the International Teacher-Training Committee have established a standard for obtaining their diploma, and it became desirable to prepare a new edition of lessons fully conformed to that standard. The book presents a general view of the most important subjects necessary to a knowledge of the Bible and of Sunday-school work.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

AUGUST 15, 1908.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE withdrawals from the American Publishers' Association indicated in our issue for July 18 as contemplated, have amounted to about one-quarter of the active membership of the Association—the more important withdrawals being those of houses engaged in the school-book business which feared that their membership might be used against them in Texas and other states. It would be unfortunate if these withdrawals should be construed as an admission on the part of the withdrawing members that the American Publishers' Association is an illegal body, or contrary to public policy. As we understand their position, the withdrawals are not because of this view, but because public sentiment in some of the Southern and Western states against trusts has been worked up to such a point that it has become regardless of actual facts or legal questions and is ready to seize upon any pretext to "hit the heads" in sight.

As we have already indicated, the remaining membership in the American Publishers' Association hopes to continue the organization and its good work despite these withdrawals, either on the present basis or by some reorganization which will avoid possible criticism while accomplishing satisfactory results. Whether there will be any change in the form of organization, or in what direction such change should be, will scarcely be decided during the vacation season, or until early fall, when more careful attention can be given to the matter by the houses chiefly concerned. We can at this writing say only that there is a strong feeling on the part of many publishers, as well as among the great body of booksellers, that to leave the publishing trade without an organization would be a serious disaster to the entire book-trade.

The American Publishers' Association at the start inadvertently made some mistakes in methods, particularly as to the treatment of non-copyright books; but the effects of the legal decisions against it have been exaggerated by the undersellers chiefly concerned. On the whole, it has given to the publishing trade an esprit du corps which otherwise it would have lacked, and has been of real service to all concerned in publishing and selling books. That a calling which should rank among the first of all should be without any kind of trade organization would make it almost a unique exception in this day of commercial associations and general organizations.

In the meantime, the American Booksellers' Association has no unimportant part to play in relation to the trade and the betterment of its methods. We have never advised anything like a boycott of the publishers who did not conform to the best trade methods or meet the views of the booksellers' organization. The public has some right to expect that on the bookseller's counter it shall see the new books without reference to questions of trade methods. But the bookseller is, from the commercial point of view, not justified in stocking up largely or pushing liberally, books which he knows are exploited chiefly through underselling, so that, as regards these, he is not on a basis of fair competition. It is therefore quite right for him, in the case of competing lines of books not of distinctive individuality to push those lines on which he knows he is fairly protected. Membership in the American Publishers' Association has indicated to him that books bearing the imprint of its members would not be pushed through underselling methods, so far as the individual member could keep control, and this has been an important point.

The early organizations of the American booktrade were based on a comprehensive scheme in which the publishers and the booksellers joined. There have been certain advantages in separate associations, conferring and co-operating with each other, and it is probably best for the general interests of the members that both associations should be continued as separate organizations.

It is to be hoped that the withdrawals of some of the members of the American Publishers' Association may not be permanent, especially if a satisfactory change of plan of continuing the organization can be devised; but in the present or some other shape, the organization should be continued without further loss of strength, and we trust the present situation may not prove discouraging to those who express their intention of remaining loyal to the Association as the best means of promoting the interests of the whole trade.

THE WAR ON PORNOGRAPHIC WORK.

THE proceedings of the first International Anti-pornographic Congress, held in Paris on May 21 and 22, just brought out,* notes that there were represented at the congress eighty-six societies organized for the suppression of indecent books and pictures. Among these France was represented by 42 societies; Germany by 14; Holland by 5; Hungary by 7; Italy by 8; Switzerland by 5; Belgium by 2, and England, Denmark and Norway by one each.

In the United States there are at least a dozen societies, chiefly in the larger cities, prominent among which are the Society for the Prevention of Crime in New York City, and the Law and Order Society in Boston.

According to the report of the congress, Belgium, which for years has been in ill-repute for its enormous production of so-called facetiæ, has practically exterminated this class of work by presistent prosecution of the offenders and by practical legislation.

On August 11, the second business day of the National Convention of American Federation of Catholic Societies held in Boston, the subcommittee on social affairs of the Resolutions Committee submitted a partial report, which was adopted. Among the resolutions was the following:

> We earnestly urge Catholics to keep up ceaseless warfare against indecent books, plays, periodicals, pictures, post-cards, billboards, and the like, and we further earnestly urge upon every Catholic society in the United States to demand of prosecuting officials the punishment of all such offenses against public morality.

MUST ALL PRINTED MATTER BEAR THE UNION LABEL?

EITHER some one has tried to play a joke on Mr. Hafeley, of the Hills & Hafeley Company, of New York, or else the Allied Printing Trades Council in Kansas City has been so affected by the heat that its members should be sent to a sanatarium for treatment. A couple of weeks ago the Hills & Hafeley Company sent out 4000 sets of folders giving descriptions and prices of cards, booklets and other novelties which the firm handles. Each of the sets consisted of three folders and a circular letter. They were sent to book and stationery dealers all over the United States. Nineteen of the sets were sent to dealers in Kansas City.

On July 24 the firm received an envelope bearing the Kansas City postmark, and inclosed were three of their folders. Across the front page of each was pasted a pink label bearing this inscription:

> RETURNED
> because of absence of union label.
> DEMAND THIS LABEL
> [here is given the cut of the union label] > on all your printed matter. It represents good workmanship, good wages, and good conditions.
> Allied Printing Trades Council.

There was nothing on the envelope to tell by which of the nineteen dealers the folders were returned, and therefore it is to be presumed that some one has been playing a joke on the American representative of the firm.

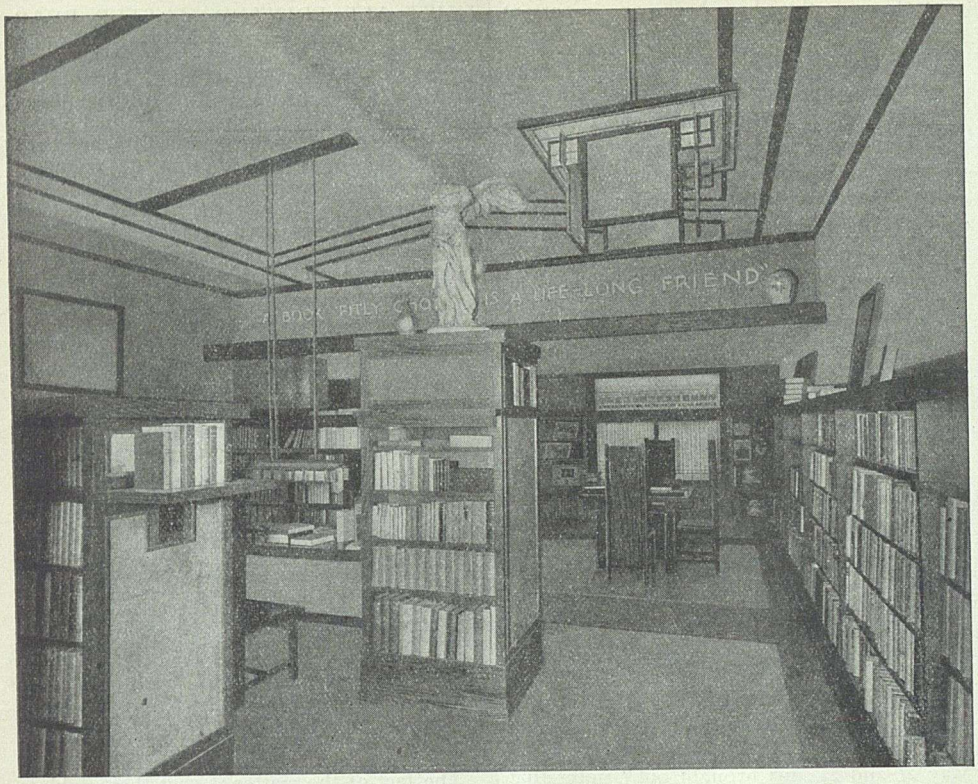
The fact of the matter is that these folders and the circular were printed in a union shop in New York City, and the members of the Allied Printing Trades Council could have satisfied themselves of this fact before they undertook to interfere, if they really did interfere, with the business of the firm. Many publishers object for good and sufficient reasons to permit their printers to place their imprint on their printed matter, and a number who patronize union printers object to having their books and other printed matter disfigured, as they call it, with the union label, which is not a work of art to say the least, as they would object to wearing a button or a badge to give evidence that they are in sympathy with union labor.

The firm is taking steps to ascertain whether the Allied Printing Trades Council has combined to take action in holding up advertising matter in this fashion, and if so to bring the matter to the attention of the United States Attorney General in order to secure relief.

WANTS FICTION PROTECTED FOR FIVE YEARS.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. are making a practical protest against the cheap reprints of popular novels by printing or stamping the following upon their orders:

"The order for this book is given with the understanding that no cheap edition shall be issued within five years. Even in such an event we reserve the right to return all unsold copies."



INTERIOR OF BROWNE'S BOOKSTORE, CHICAGO.

A UNIQUE BOOKSTORE.

THE choice of a location for a bookstore is always a matter of concern and perplexity. Given a favorable vicinity, where shall the store be located? If on the main thoroughfare, shall the store be on the corner or nearer to car connections, even if the store must be in the middle of the block, or on a side street near the main thoroughfare? Must the store be on the side of the street that is free of the sun in the afternoon, or may a store in a good location on the sunny side have attractions that will more than balance the advantages of a store in a less favorable location on the shady side of the street? and so on to the end of the chapter. Of course, in most cases the question of rent will decide the choice; but sometimes a more expensive location will outweigh other considerations. But, wherever a bookseller will establish himself, he insists that his store shall be on the "ground floor," in more senses of the word than one.

Occasionally, a dealer in second-hand books, whose business is largely conducted through the mails, has found is more convenient as well as economical to set up his shop in an upper floor of some large business building. Indeed, there are quite a number of these in the larger cities of this country.

Thus far, however, only one dealer in all classes of books has had the courage to locate his store up "in the air," and the credit of being the pioneer in this respect belongs to the Dial Company of Chicago, of which Francis Fisher Browne is president, which, as already noted by us, has located Browne's Bookstore on the seventh floor of the Fine Arts Building on the Michigan Boulevard in Chicago.

It would, perhaps, be rash to say that Browne's Bookstore has set up an example that will be imitated to any extent by booksellers. On the contrary, such a move would likely prove disastrous unless another location could be found that possessed so many of the happy circumstances that conspired to make the Browne undertaking possible. The Fine Arts Building in Chicago seems about the best kind of foundation upon which to build a bookstore, occupied, as it is, by a clientage almost large enough, independently, to support such an institution. In it are housed artists, musicians, some of the leading picture dealers, the arts and crafts people, teachers of foreign languages, book binders, the Western offices of some of the leading Eastern magazines and publishing houses, the cartoonists, certain of the city's best-known clubs, and other interests more or less in touch with literary, art and cultural matters. When one goes down town, providing he is a certain sort of a person, he inevitably goes to the Fine Arts Building. Then, each one of the tenants attracts numbers of others of kindred tastes, and, therefore, as we have said above, a bookseller in such surroundings would have about as good a chance of succeeding as if located in a store on the street.

Having found his location, Mr. Browne, in planning and fitting his bookstore, sought to combine the best features of a well-equipped bookstore with those of a choice home library. Through the co-operation of Frank Lloyd Wright as architect, the interior has been given a beauty and distinction, combined with special provisions for the comfort and convenience of visitors, that make it unique among existing bookstores.

The store, which is accessible by swift elevators that fly from street level to the seventh floor at the rate of several a minute, looks out on the clear waters of Lake Michigan through an atmosphere but slightly smoked and undisturbed by the noise and clatter of the streets. Entering, the visitor loses himself in the low vaulted cloisters whose monastic-like cells are lined with the best books, arranged in the most tempting manner, and, as the Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones has said, presently "wonders whether he is not in Florence and looks around for the Fra Angelico frescoes or a Savonarola chair, for there is something in the architecture that suggests San Marco." The space is divided into two rooms. In the larger, there is an arrangement of alcoves along one side; each alcove has its chairs and table and reading light. The shelves extend only part way up the walls, giving the effect of a home library. By a unique system of shelf-lighting, the title of every volume from top shelf to bottom may easily be read, while at the same time the lights are wholly hidden from the eye. The smaller room contains no shelving, but is arranged with cases and tables for the display of fine bindings and special editions. A large fire-place and comfortable easy-chairs give this the appearance of an attractive living-room. Every fixture and every piece of furniture in both rooms has been specially designed and manufactured to order. The cases, tables, chairs, and wall trimmings are of quartered oak throughout.

The book shop has lowered its ceilings, economized its space, and set between every tier of shelves—for the shelves are disposed as in some libraries, at right angles to the wall—a long library table, with dependent reading lamps, high-backed chairs, and every convenience for passing a pleasant afternoon. One is invited to come in and be happy. Clerks who really know something about the books are in evidence, but are scrupulously inattentive. When they are required, they can be summoned. The price of every book is marked in plain figures, and it is unnecessary to ask the cost. Certain afternoons tea is served by clever women. Folk drink and talk, buy books and incite others to do the same. It is unnecessary to say that the scheme of furnishing and decoration is beautiful. Even the oil sketches upon the wall are unusual and charming. The soft oiled wood, the originality of every article in the place, and the air of aloof leisure are vastly inviting.

The firm has prepared an attractive booklet describing its shop in detail with illustrations of its more prominent features, which will be sent free to all who may be interested. We advise every bookseller to avail himself of the opportunity of securing one.

THE U. S. GOVERNMENT AT THE ESPERANTO CONGRESS.

Esperanto has been recognized officially by the United States Government in the appointment of Major Paul F. Straub, of the army medical corps, to represent this country in the Fourth International Esperanto Congress, held at Dresden, Saxony, this month—from August 16 to 22. Belgium was the first nation to give its official recognition to this language by sending Lieutenant Cardinal to the third congress, held at Cambridge, England, last August.

The War Department library was the first institution in Washington to recognize the value of Esperanto as an auxiliary language, and it began the accumulation of Esperanto literature in January, 1906. The Washington Esperanto Society was organized in the spring of 1907. Its presidents thus far have been James W. Cheney, librarian of the War Department, and Charles W. Stewart, superintendent of the naval war records and library, both of whom hold certificates given to those who have passed the advanced examination of the British Esperanto Association.

That Esperanto has taken a firm root throughout the world is indicated by the number of groups formed in various countries and the diversity of their scope and composition. Its advocates say Esperanto is destined to become one of the most important factors of the world's progress. At the end of December, 1907, the total number of Esperanto schools and societies throughout the world was 753. At the present time the total is practically one thousand. A proof of the progress of the Esperanto movement is the constant appearance of new Esperanto periodicals. On June 25 last there were fifty-five Esperanto gazettes, most of them monthlies, an increase of eleven over the number of December, 1907.

In Bohemia the postmaster-general has authorized the use of Esperanto in telegrams on an equal footing with European modern languages.

POPULAR FICTION IN ENGLAND DURING JULY.

The London Book Monthly, in reviewing the English book market for July, notes the following leading novels:

Love the Harvester, by Max Pemberton. Methuen.

Gotty in Furrin Parts, by A. E. Cotting. Chapman & Hall.

The Easy-Go-Luckies, by Maud Stepney Rawson. Methuen.

Aunt Maud, by Ernest Oldmeadow. Grant Richards.

The Bloom o' the Heather, by S. R. Crockett. Eveleigh Nash.

Handy on the Hill, by M. E. Francis. Methuen.

Referring to the serious books The Book Monthly says "one is struck with the quantity of verse which has been issued in July. Can it be that the minor poets are changing the season of their singing from spring to midsummer?"

OBJECTION TO UNION-MADE HISTORIES SUSTAINED.

The Confederate veterans have succeeded in having objectionable text book matter banished from the public schools of Texas. Governor Campbell, of Texas, on August 7, approved certain changes to be made in the Myers books, adopted for use in the Texas schools. These changes eliminate the objections first raised by John B. Hood Camp of Confederate Veterans and seconded generally by Confederate veterans' camps.

A number of matters relating to Texas history are substituted for the so-called objectionable matter, which consisted mainly in reference to northern generals who participated in the war between the States while omitting all reference to Confederate military or civil leaders.

OBITUARY.

AINSWORTH RAND SPOFFORD.

Ainsworth Rand Spofford, librarian of the Library of Congress from 1864 to 1897 and later chief assistant librarian, died on August 12 at Shepard Hill, Holderness, N. H. Mr. Spofford was the son of a clergyman and was born September 12, 1825 at Gilmanton, N. H. He received a classical education at home under private tutors, and early developed a love for literature and books that gave direction to his future career. When only nineteen years old he went to Cincinnati and started in business as a bookseller and publisher. He studied modern languages, engaged in literary pursuits in his leisure time, and was one of the founders of the Literary Club of Cincinnati in 1850. Nine years later he became assistant editor of The Cincinnati Daily Commercial. Going to Washington in 1861, Mr. Spofford was appointed by President Lincoln first assistant librarian of the Library of Congress, and in 1864, upon the resignation of Mr. Stephenson, he was made librarian in chief, a post he held until 1897.

Washington knew Mr. Spofford as an "encyclopædia of encyclopædias." He knew everything about books except the books that a business man keeps. He had charge of the pay roll and the accounts of the fees received for copyrights. The Treasury Department rarely called for an accounting. When it did so, in 1895, the auditors found a discrepancy which was figured out finally as $22,000.

Mr. Spofford was surprised when he heard of it, but he made good the $22,000 without question. There was no idea that the shortage was due to anything but carelessness. The matter was explained when the work of removing the books from the Capitol to the new building was begun. In a drawer in Mr. Spofford's private desk $800 in currency and a number of checks were found. Another drawer was filled with money orders, some of them for as much as $500. Bundles of postal orders were in other desks in his office. Some of these bore dates as far back as 1870.

The total of these finds made up the shortage, and as Mr. Spofford had already made good the deficit he got the money. It was learned then that Mr. Spofford's habit was to take the checks or money orders he received for copyrights, thrust them into a drawer and then go on about the business he was interested in—running a library.

Congress decided that the added responsibilities of the new building demanded talents of a different kind from those possessed by Mr. Spofford, and so he was made chief assistant, a change that pleased him, for it gave him all his time for books.

Promoters of bookselling schemes, notably the men who exploited "Messages and Papers of the Presidents," used Mr. Spofford's name to help them, but it was shown that he had allowed the use of his name without realizing the purpose of it. Mr. Spofford was the author of a "Practical Manual of Parliamentary Rules," "A Book for All Readers," and edited the "Annual American Almanac," 1878-1898, the catalogues of the Congressional Library, etc.

MRS. LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON, novelist and poet, died on August 10 at her home in Rutland Square, Boston, Mass. Mrs. Moulton was born in Pomfret, Conn., April 10, 1835, and spent her entire life in literary work. When eighteen Mrs. Moulton brought out a small volume of stories, poems and sketches she had had published in periodicals up to that time. Several of these poems and short stories appeared in The Boston True Flag, then edited by William V. Moulton. This editor became greatly interested in his young contributor, and in 1855 they were married. He helped her afterward in a great deal of her work, and in 1889 died. Mrs. Moulton during her married life became one of Boston's social leaders. At one of these functions Longfellow, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Julia Ward Howe and Thomas Wentworth Higginson were gathered at the table. Among her best-known works are "This, That, and the Other," "My Third Book," "Lazy Tours in Spain and Elsewhere," "Bed-time Stories," "Some Women's Hearts," "Random Rambles" and "Firelight Stories." In 1870 Mrs. Moulton became identified with the New York Tribune and wrote literary reviews for that paper until 1876, when she went to Boston and did the same work for the Herald until 1892, when she retired from the newspaper field and devoted herself to writing books.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

ANATOLE FRANCE, whose complete works are being brought out in English by John Lane Company, New York, has recently gone on a visit to Greece. At his departure from Paris one of his facetious comrades remarked: "France has, for a time, now left us for Greece, and he is carrying with him honey to Mount Hymettus and salt to Athens." France, by the way, is the author's pen name. His real name is Jaques Anatole Thibault. John Lane Company are adding this week to the complete limited edition the novel called "The Red Lily," translated by Winifred Stephens, author of "French Novelists of To-day."

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

THE OFFICE OF THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is about ready to send out "The Publishers' Trade List Annual," for 1908. The volume this year contains the lists of 313 publishers, filling in all 5640 pages, or 300 pages more than in 1907. It seems hardly necessary to point out the importance of this reference book for those in the booktrade or in libraries, as well as for those interested in the books that are in the market. The price of the volume, until September 1, will be $1.50, paid in advance. After September 1 the price will be $2. "The Publishers' Weekly American Educational List," for 1908, in leatherette binding, is also just ready. This list plans to include all text-books used in American schools and academic institutions, (not in universities, professional or technical schools,) and books prepared especially for supplementary reading in primary and grammar schools; also, classical and foreign texts as are required for college entrance examinations, 1908-1911. The list is up-to-date, and helpful to all interested in the sale as well as in the use of text-books. (130 p. 8°, 50 cents.)

WILLIAM TIMOTHY CALL, 123 Liberty Street, New York City, has compiled and published a neatly printed bibliography entitled "The Literature of Checkers, embracing all the Books, Pamphlets, and Magazines on the Game of English Draughts, Commonly Known as Checkers." Mr. Call says that the game of checkers has been called "the ancient game," to distinguish it from Spanish, Italian, Polish, German and Turkish draughts, each a distinct game, with more or less of a literature of its own. A game played in Spain before America was discovered, however, was so like modern checkers that collectors of books on checkers eagerly seek the treatises on the Spanish game by Canalejas (1650) and Garces, (1684.) Besides Pierre Mallet, Quercetain and others wrote early French books on the game. It is interesting to know that there are ten collections of books on checkers in England and in the United States which Mr. Call considers "first-class." There are perhaps fifty of the second grade. Collectors of checker literature, it will be seen, form an exclusive set among the bibliophile. Mr. Call says that the checker library of Henry Hutzler, of Cincinnati, is complete, except for the omission of B. Pearce's work, the first American book on the subject. This is a paper-covered pamphlet of twenty-four pages, published at Albany in 1815. (12°, $1.)

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.

Charles Higham & Son, 27 Farrington St., London, E.C., Theology. (No. 472, 1118 titles.)

Charles E. Lauriat Co., 385 Washington St., Boston, Mass., Fine old books from London. (Lauriat's Boston Book Notes, v. IV., No. 3, 113 titles.)

Toronto Antiquarian Book Co., 5 Jordan St., Toronto, Can., Miscellaneous books, including standard books for the library, history, etc. (No. 27, 510 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

MITCHELL KENNERLEY, New York City, has brought out a scholarly edition of "Everyman," with introduction, notes and a bibliography by Montrose J. Moses, and illustrations from the recent representation of the old morality play.

MOFFAT, YARD & Co. will publish this fall a story for children by Frances Hodgson Burnett, entitled "The Good Wolf." Through its serial publication the four-legged hero is already one of the most popular of her characters. The book will be illustrated in colors by Harold Sichel.

THE J. S. OGILVIE PUBLISHING COMPANY have just ready a new edition of "Wilful Gaynell," under the title of "The Beauty of the Passaic Mills," by Laura Jean Libbey. The story is now running serially in the New York Evening Journal and the demand for it in book form is already quite large.

SAMUEL REIS, for years manager of the retail department of the American Tract Society, has resigned his position to take charge of the advertising department of The Congregationalist of Boston. Mr. Reis will devote two days of the week to the business in Boston and the remainder of the week to the business in New York. His appointment will date from September 1.

JOHN F. DWYER, 83 Nassau Street, New York City, has just brought out the thirty-eighth annual issue of the Phillips Business Directory of New York City and representative business houses of Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and Hoboken. It contains also a French department, which gives the names of French dealers in automobiles, balloons, cognacs, billiard articles, jewelry and other supplies.

L. C. PAGE & Co. have in preparation "Tales from Bohemia," a collection of the early short stories of the late Robert Neilson Stephens. Nearly all of them are connected with the theatre. They have also in preparation "The Travels of a Lady's Maid," by an anonymous author, who prefaces, ends and slightly flavors a pleasant story of an English party's journey around the earth by gossip supposed to be written by a Scotch lady's maid.

THE H. R. HUNTTING COMPANY, Inc., Springfield, Mass., has prepared a list of one hundred of the best novels in constant use by a number of libraries. If the plan meets with sufficient support the Huntting Company will purchase from the publishers the best sheets obtainable of the books on their list and bind them for libraries in durable bindings, sewed with Rademaekers' flexible overcasting stitch, with the best English pigskin backs and keratol weather-proof sides. At a small additional expense the library's name will be stamped on each book.

B. W. HUEBSCH will publish in the fall a book by Franklin Matthews describing the cruise of the sixteen battleships of the United States Atlantic fleet from Hampton Roads to the Pacific. Mr. Matthews was one of the correspondents accompanying the fleet, and his articles giving an account of the cruise furnished a record of life on shipboard, the trip through the Strait of Magellan, the receptions to officers and men at the various South and Central American ports. These articles will now be brought together and issued, with appropriate illustrations, as a continuous chronicle of a voyage unique in the history of our navy.

Y. OKURA & Co., Nihonbashi, Tokyo, Japan, have just brought out a translation of one of K. Natsume's ingenious conceits, entitled "I Am a Cat." The story deals with every-day affairs, but with much force and humor. The translation made by Kan-ichi-ando, was revised by the author. The book has already gone through six editions. Okura & Co. have also ready a volume entitled "Stray Leaves," by Professor K. Wadagaki, a collection of famous Japanese poetry, dramas, plays and various masterpieces of Japanese and Chinese literature, given in the original and in English translations. The text is illustrated, in colors, by native artists.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have in press an English translation of "A Woman at Bay," ("Una Donna,") by Sibilla Aleramo, a story concerned with the delicate problem of divorce, which has created a sensation in the original as well as in translations into Russian, German, French and Spanish; "Judith of the Cumberlands," by Miss Alic MacGowan, originally announced as "The Strength of the Hills," a story of life in the Tennessee mountains; also, "The Century of the Child," by Ellen Key, the Swedish writer, whose views of education will appeal to those who are opposed to the mechanical methods of bringing up young people.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY will bring out in September a love story of Milton by Mrs. Caroline Atwater Mason, entitled "Binding of the Strong;" "The Web of Time," by Robert E. Knowles, author of "St. Cuthbert's," etc., the story of a lad whose fate is whittled out with merciless severity, but leaves him a rare man; "The Victor," by Richard S. Holmes, the editor of The Westminster of Philadelphia, a story which centres in the life of the Pennsylvania mountains in the days preceding and during the oil boom, whose plot is of unusual dramatic interest—full of the mystery of plots and counterplots that carries the reader as far afield as a Maine village and Japan before returning to the centre of interest; also, a new novel by W. J. Dawson, entitled "A Soldier of the Future," which is said to touch on some live questions of the day.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made to hold a booktrade dinner in London on October 9 next. This is being organized by the newly-formed Publishers' Circle with the approval of the principal members of The Publishers' Association. The president of the Association, Edward Bell, will be in the chair, and Mr. Keay, the president of the Booksellers' Association, has joined the organizing committee. The proposal has also received the approval of the committee of the Authors' Society, and several well-known authors will attend as the guests of their publishers. Invitations to be present have also been sent to a few well-known publishers and booksellers on the Continent. Any American publishers who may be in England during October are asked to communicate with the honorable secretary of the dinner committee, A. D. Power, care Isaac Pitman & Sons, 1 Amen Corner, London.

A. Wessels Company will bring out next month a work on the "Evolution in Italian Art," by Grant Allen, based on studies made in Italian galleries, edited by J. W. and A. M. Cruikshank, which will serve as an authentic guide to the study of Italian art; "Pagan Rome," a new volume in their series of Historical Guide Books; "Abraham Lincoln," a stirring eulogy by George Bancroft, a literary treasure recently discovered; "The Wisdom of Lincoln," extracts from the speeches and state-papers and letters of the great President, edited by Dr. Marion Mills Miller; "Vaiti of the Islands," by Beatrice Grimshaw, with illustrations by H. C. Williamson; also, two essays on "Friendship," by Emerson and Cicero, the "Maxims" of La Rochefoucauld, with the French and English on facing pages, and the Rubáiyát with John Hay's address, "In Praise of Omar," in the Bradford Series, a series of classics gotten up for presentation purposes, carefully printed with border in two colors and a portrait frontispiece.

C. S. Hammond & Co., 152 Broadway, New York City, have brought out a "Road Map of the Country Around New York," showing good roads, fair roads, etc., which retails at twenty-five cents; a "Guide Map of Brooklyn, N. Y.," showing all streets, subways, tunnels, ferries, elevated and surface railroads, parks, etc., which retails at fifteen cents; also, a "Guide Map of Queens Borough, N. Y.," giving the same information as the map of Brooklyn and retailing at the same price. These maps are folded so as to fit into any coat pocket. They have also brought out "Hammond's Atlas of New York City and the Metropolitan District," a quarto, giving new maps of each borough on large scale, (10¼ x 13½ inches,) showing streets, avenues, subways, tunnels, all transportation routes, etc., also road maps of the country around New York, with automobile routes, etc. Another interesting book just ready is "The United States Navy," a series of over sixty reproductions of the battleship of the United States from original photographs.

Henry Holt & Co. will bring out this month the following fiction: "A Lord of Lands," by Ramsey Benson, the simple story of a man with a very small income and a large family who determines to leave the city and become a farmer in the Northwest, told by the man himself with much humor and good sense; also, "Angel, Esquire," by Edgar Wallace, a good detective story, in which an inexperienced girl has to contend with three unscrupulous and daring criminals for millions strangely bequeathed to one of the four. For young people they are preparing for publication during August "The Adopting of Rosa Marie," a sequel to "Dandelion Cottage," by Mrs. C. W. Rankin, illustrated by Mrs. Shinn, a story for girls, which is concerned with the fate and fortunes of a little Indian papoose; "Roy and Ray in Canada," by Mary W. Plummer, director of the Pratt Institute Library School," and author of "Roy and Ray in Mexico," which embodies very much that is interesting concerning Canadian history, manners and customs, as well as descriptions that describe and pictures that really illustrate, making the book useful as a travel guide as well as useful to teachers and school children; also, "Pete, Cow Puncher," by Joseph B. Ames, illustrated by Victor Perard, which, while originally intended for growing boys, will also appeal to their elders.

Among the novels announced for the fall by The Macmillan Company is a story entitled "Helianthus," on which Ouida worked for years and which was completed just before her death. It is a brilliant historical romance of the present time in which many of the makers of modern history appear but thinly disguised. Other novels in active preparation are "The Diva's Ruby," by F. Marion Crawford, the third of the trilogy that began with "Fair Margaret" and "The Primadonna," the three telling the whole story of the English girl who became known to fame as a great singer; "Friendship Village," another attractive book by Zona Gale, whose charming story of "The Loves of Pelleas and Etarre" is one not soon to be forgotten; "The War in the Air," a romance of aviation, by H. G. Wells; "Wroth," by Agnes and Egerton Castle, a story full of the romantic spirit for which the Castles are famous, the plot centering around an old English abbey; "A Canadian Girl in London," by Mrs. Everard Cotes, (Sara Jeanette Duncan,) a tale that concerns a Canadian girl and her brother who visit London for the first time and become involved in adventures that lead up to a pretty love affair and give the author opportunity for some of her most original observations on English society and the English character; also, "Joan of Garioch," by Albert Kinross, author of "Davenant," etc., a book which takes its readers well over the world—from South Africa to England, then to France, Italy, Russia and back to England.

E. P. Dutton & Co. will publish in September the following books for young people: "In Texas with Davy Crockett," by Everett McNeil, the story of the adventures of two boys during that dramatic period when Texas won her independence from Mexico; "Bob Knight's Diary with the Circus," by Charlotte Curtis Smith, another of the interesting "Bob Knight" books; "The Story of Sir Galahad," by Mary Blackwell Sterling, in which the author has taken the thread of the story from the old sources and has separated it from the mass of material found in Malory and the earlier writers, with illustrations in color by William Ernest Chapman; "The Jimpy Stories," by H. Grace Parsons, stories for younger readers told by a mother at bedtime, with illustrations; "The Millers and their New Home," by Clara Dillingham Pierson, the fourth of The Pencroft Books, telling in simple language the story of the adventures of a normal family of children in a quiet home in the country; "The Story of Grettèr the Strong," by Allen French, an old hero tale from the Norwegian, with illustrations in color by F. I. Bennett; "The Water Babies," by Charles Kingsley, with illustrations in color and in black-and-white by Arthur A. Dixon; "Jumbo and his Family," the adventures of a family of elephants told and pictured by Henry Mayer; The Little Mother Stories, four new numbers by John Howard Jewett, including "Bunnies, Birds and Blossoms," "Wild Rabb and his Bunny Friends," "Tame Bunnies and Wild," and "Toy Bearkins at School," with illustrations in colors, and in the same series "Warriors Brave," by M. M. Jameson, the stirring adventures of a regiment of tin soldiers, also, "A Day with the Gnomes," by Ernest Endres, both with colored illustrations; six new volumes in The Told to the Children Series, including "The Story of Roland," "Stories of the Saints," "The Story of Undine," "Simple Susan," "Stories from Beowulf" and "Stories from the Nibelungen;" two new volumes in The Children's Heroes, by H. E. Marshall, on Napoleon and Cromwell; two new volumes in the Stories from History series—"Stories of the Vikings" and "Stories from the History of France;" "The Playmate," a new book for boys, by Charles Turley, with illustrations by H. R. Millar; "The April Fool Twins," by Elizabeth Westyn Timlow, author of the "Cricket Books," describing the events in an American family of the best sort; "Our Farm," a story box of four simple stories for children, by Virginia Bennett; also, four new books in Every Child's Library, edited by Thomas Cartwright, including "One for Wod and One for Lok," "Sigurd the Dragon Slayer," "The Old, Old Myths of Greece and Rome" and "The Seven Champions of Christendom," all fully illustrated. They have in preparation for publication in the fall "The Chronicles of England, France and Spain," a condensed version of Froissart's Chronicles, with illustrations in colors and in black-and-white.

A Novel Entitled

A Little Brother of the Rich

¶ The author is a man of distinguished social, financial and political position.

¶ His name will be announced in The Publishers' Weekly of August 29th; will appear in all our advertisements and will be on the cover, title page and jacket of all books.

¶ The fact that this man has written A LITTLE BROTHER OF THE RICH is sure to cause a large amount of comment both in the newspapers and in society circles.

¶ Meanwhile nothing will please us better than to have dealers inform themselves of the character and strength of this novel; therefore, upon request, we will send an advance copy free of charge.

¶ Our advertising campaign will be both extensive and unique.
